Proverb on Resilience: Shiyan mahara

Resource Identifier: CULT-PROV-006

English Translation: Iron is Tempered by Striking

Category: Proverb | Subcategory: Resilience

Village / Region: Ukhrul | Dialect: Ukhrul

Contributor / Source: Traditional Blacksmith & Moral Lore (Documented in Arokianathan 1982)

License: Traditional Oral Heritage (Permissions: community_authorized)

Seasonal Timing / Occasion: Moral encouragement during adversity

---

Ethnographic Summary & Context:

Original saying: 'Shiyan mahara ngalemli.' Drawing on indigenous metallurgical crafts, it teaches that hardships fortify moral character.

Indigenous Tangkhul Text / Chants / Sayings:

"Shiyan mahara ngalemli."

English Translation & Meaning:

"Iron is tempered and transformed into resilient steel only by striking."

Procedural Sequence / Observance Steps:

Shared as moral encouragement when facing difficult trials, sickness, or hardship.

Ceremonial Participants & Roles:

Mentors, Apprentices, Youth