[HIST-PLC-002] Makhel Dispersal Site

Translation / Context: Sacred Ancestral Dispersal Point

Category: PLACE | Period: Ancient Oral Tradition | Date: Ancestral Era
Place: Makhel [Makhel] | Dialect: Standard Tangkhul
Source: Documented in Hodson 1911, Horam 1977 (1200)
Clearance: Oral Folk Heritage | Permission: community_authorized | Status: verified

---

Key Figures: Pan-Naga Ancestral Patriarchs, Clan Lineage Forefathers, Makhel Village Custodians

Topography: Makhel, Northern Manipur (Latitude 25.52° N, Longitude 94.18° E)

Overview: Sacred historical settlement recognized across Tangkhul, Mao, Maram, and related Naga communities as the common parting point of lineages, marked by the sacred wild pear tree (Chutebu) and megalithic

---

Indigenous Tangkhul Chronicle / Oral Memory:

Makhel rali Tangkhul, Mao, Maram, Poumai kala khangatei Naga tribes-wui
Chutebu thing-kapan (sacred pear tree) kala lung-kaphung megalith-bingna
Hiyakha thotli maranao-bingna farewell feast sangda kaphung kachivali ng

---

English Translation & Scholarly Interpretation:

Makhel is universally revered as the sacred dispersal point of the Tangk
The ancient sacred wild pear tree (Chutebu) and commemorative stone mono
At the parting of lineages, the ancestors held a sacred covenant meal be

---

Chronological Milestones & Key Events:

1. Ancient Oral Era: Unified ancestral community resides at Makhel in northern Senapati district.
2. Parting of Lineages: Population growth prompts peaceful migration outward into designated hill ranges.
3. Planting of Chutebu: Ancestors plant the wild pear tree with a covenant to remember their common origin.
4. Erection of Parting Monoliths: Monoliths erected at the crossroads marking routes to Ukhrul, Kohima, and the valley.

Key Tangkhul Historical Terminology:

* Makhel : Sacred place of ancestral parting
* Chutebu : The sacred covenant pear tree
* Lung-kaphung : Erected megalithic stone marker