[LIT-STRY-003] Yarnao wui Akhama

Translation: The Morning of the Labor Exchange

Work Type: SHORT_STORY | Creator: V. Ruivah | Year: 1993
Village: Somdal | Dialect: Standard Tangkhul | Book ID: None
Publisher / Source: Anthropological Literary Series, Imphal
Clearance: Scholarly Publication | Permission: permitted | Status: verified

---

Themes: Communal agricultural labor groups (Yarnao) as the heartbeat of village society, Antiphonal singing and rhythmic synchronization in manual

Structure & Meter: Vivid atmospheric short story capturing the sounds, sensory smells, an

---

Critical Overview: Authored by anthropologist and literary writer V. Ruivah in 1993, this story provides an invaluable literary depiction of

---

Indigenous Tangkhul Literary Text / Stanzas:

Akhama dawn mist-li Yarnao youth labor group-na drum and song-li terrace
Mayarnao kala shanaonao communal paddy transplantation (Luisak)-li rhyth
Mutual aid, youth humor, folk singing, kala agricultural festivity vibra

---

English Translation & Literary Rendering:

In the cool morning mist, the youth cooperative labor band (Yarnao) ma
Young men and maidens transplanted green seedlings (Luisak) in rhythmi
The narrative captures the vibrant camaraderie, witty banter, and commun

---

Key Poetic & Literary Vocabulary Terms:

* Yarnao : Youth peer labor collective for mutual farm work
* Akhama : Dawn twilight / the fresh morning hour
* Luisak : Ceremonial transplanting of green paddy seedlings